[Passage]

The rise of social media has transformed how teenagers interact with each other and the world. Recent studies have shown that teenagers who spend more than three hours daily on social platforms report higher levels of anxiety, depression, and feelings of isolation. However, other research indicates that social media can provide valuable support networks, especially for teens who feel marginalized in their physical communities. As platforms continue to evolve, the debate about their overall impact on adolescent mental health remains complex and multifaceted.
